The PHOENICIA LAUNDRY has been operating for more than seventeen years.

It started with the most up-to-date machinery and has remained up-to-date by building expansion and regular plant additions to meet the ever-increasing demand.

Our DRY CLEANING department is several years younger but its success has been none the less remarkable.

Its machine capacity has already been trebled to speed up deliveries.

In these days when the development of local industry is in the forefront of the news we take pride in stating that the PHOENICIA LAUNDRY and DRY CLEANING departments give employment to 75 operatives.

PART I

Overture

Rossini

LA CENERENTOLA

Cenerentola is written in the tradition of the light Italian Comic Opera. It was first performed in Rome in 1917 when Rossini was barely 25 years old. The opera has pathos and comedy, coloratura fireworks and witty exchanges and it is concluded by one of Rossini's most celebrated vocal show-pieces.

Cenerentola has played a prominent part in the post-war revival of Rossini's music.

Symphony No. 18 in F Sharp minor

Haydn

(FAREWELL SYMPHONY)

Allegro Assai

Adagio

Minuetto

Presto

This symphony was written for the concerts given by Prince Esterhazy at his beautiful but isolated summer residence Esterhaz of whose orchestra Haydn was conductor. Esterhaz was the Prince's favourite retreat, so much so that, to the musicians who were separated from their wives and families his stays there became so intolerably long that it became necessary to find a means of expressing their displeasure and desire for leave of absence. This, Haydn, ingeniously did by the finale to this symphony in which each player, as he finishes his part, blows out his candle and leaves the orchestra, taking his instrument and music with him, leaving only the two principal violins to finish. It is recorded that this humorous device achieved the desired result.

INTERVAL

PART II

FIRST PERFORMANCE IN MALTA

REQUIEM

Gabriel Faure'

Soprano — HILDA MALLIA TABONE.

Baritone — VICTOR GAUCI.

The 'Requiem' Op. 48 a work of supreme delicacy and sweetness is Faure's best remembered composition, and is indeed acclaimed as a supreme masterpiece. It is an entirely original work owing little to anyone's influence except possibly for a vague remembrance of Wagner's 'Parsifal' which the composer had just seen before starting work on this music.

The mass originally written in memory of Faure's father who had died in 1885 was given its first performance in 1888 at the Madeleine, under the direction of the composer himself, by which time it served as a double requiem as his mother had also died. The work was originally scored lightly for strings, with a solo violin part, harp, organ and three trombones.

The fuller orchestral version was transcribed by the composer himself in 1899.

The spirit of the work is rather optimistic, evoking the heavenly peace of the departed soul rather than the harshness of judgement, or the gloom of the attendant audience which invariably underlie the spirit of other "Requiems".

The work is divided in seven parts:

The "Introito" starts off with a genuine sense of sorrow which serves as an introduction to the ingeniously phrased "Kyrie".

The "Offertory" smoothly linked to the preceding theme starts as a plaintive plea for deliverance but soon moves into the calm invocation by solo Baritone seemingly reassured by the spirit of God.

The "Sanctus" is a simple expression of adoration with a moving accompaniment, breaking out in the end into the triumphant "Hossanna".

The "Pie Jiesus" for soprano solo is a gentle prayer in supplication.

The "Agnus Dei" is a most tranquil melody, evolving into a sorrowful mood which is eventually dispelled by the final orchestral coda.

The "Libera Me" is underlined by a spirit of loneliness, praying for God's mercy in his wrath. Fear is reflected in the accompaniment but gradually dispelled by the calm assurance of the vocal parts.

The finale "In Paradisum" immediately dispels the gloom with a gentle message of hope, providing a glimpse of heavenly peace and eternal light.
