

GAME REVIEW

by Costantino Oliva

HOTLINE MIAMI 2: WRONG NUMBER

Indie games have allowed a new generation of creative developers to experiment. Nostalgia is a leading trope: defunct genres are being resurrected, and the 8-bit aesthetic is a stylistic trademark. Adhering to this practice, the first episode of Hotline Miami chewed-up old-school arcade games and nineties ultraviolence, mixing it up with a contemporary, psychedelic audiovisual blend.

Hotline Miami 2 keeps all of that with a set of new mechanics: players can now shoot sideways, roll under enemy fire, and brandish katanas. The game's greatest merit is to carefully balance unabashed mayhem with careful strategy. You will need to memorise patterns and act quickly at the right time. And then, do it again and again.

As a sequel, Hotline Miami 2 feels rather conventional. As expected, every part of the game has been expanded and the game mechanics have been completely exploited. Its narrative has been exhausted and lost sequential logic. It now serves as a backdrop for yet another suicide assault.

Hotline Miami 2 is undoubtedly a joy: a well-crafted, ultrafast ride, with a fantastic, inspired soundtrack. The game is designed to satisfy its fanbase. The struggle continues between innovation and conservatism. T

Platforms: Microsoft Windows, OS X, Linux, Playstation 3, Playstation 4, Playstation Vita

Developer: Dennaton Games/Devolver Digital

Baroque

UNIVERSITY OF MALTA
International Institute for Baroque Studies

Master of Arts in Baroque Studies

The University of Malta is accepting applications from interested individuals to follow a postgraduate course leading to the award of a Master of Arts in Baroque Studies. This course is geared to disseminate multi-disciplinary knowledge about the wealth of the Baroque legacy of mankind and its conservation. Prospective applicants are required to be in possession of a Bachelor's degree at second class level or equivalent in an area of study as deemed relevant by the Board of the Institute.

This interesting course, to be held over a period of 3 semesters full-time or 5 semesters part-time day is run by the International Institute for Baroque Studies. Topics such as the political, intellectual, religious, scientific and medical scenarios of Baroque Europe; fortification building, city planning and architecture in the Baroque age; baroque music and theatre; the visual arts and literature, and the conservation of the Baroque heritage as well as others will be covered in the curriculum.

The University will accept online applications at: www.um.edu.mt/apply until the 24 July 2015. Late applications will also be accepted till 30 September 2015. Course information is available at <http://www.um.edu.mt/courses> whilst further information can be obtained from the Institute's website: www.um.edu.mt/iibs or from the administrative office of the Institute on iibs@um.edu.mt, 2340 2772 during office hours.