"BLACK AND PROUD"

(NEGRO SPIRITUALS AND SONGS OF PROTEST)

Presented by

THE LEX MONSON AFRO-AMERICAN SINGERS

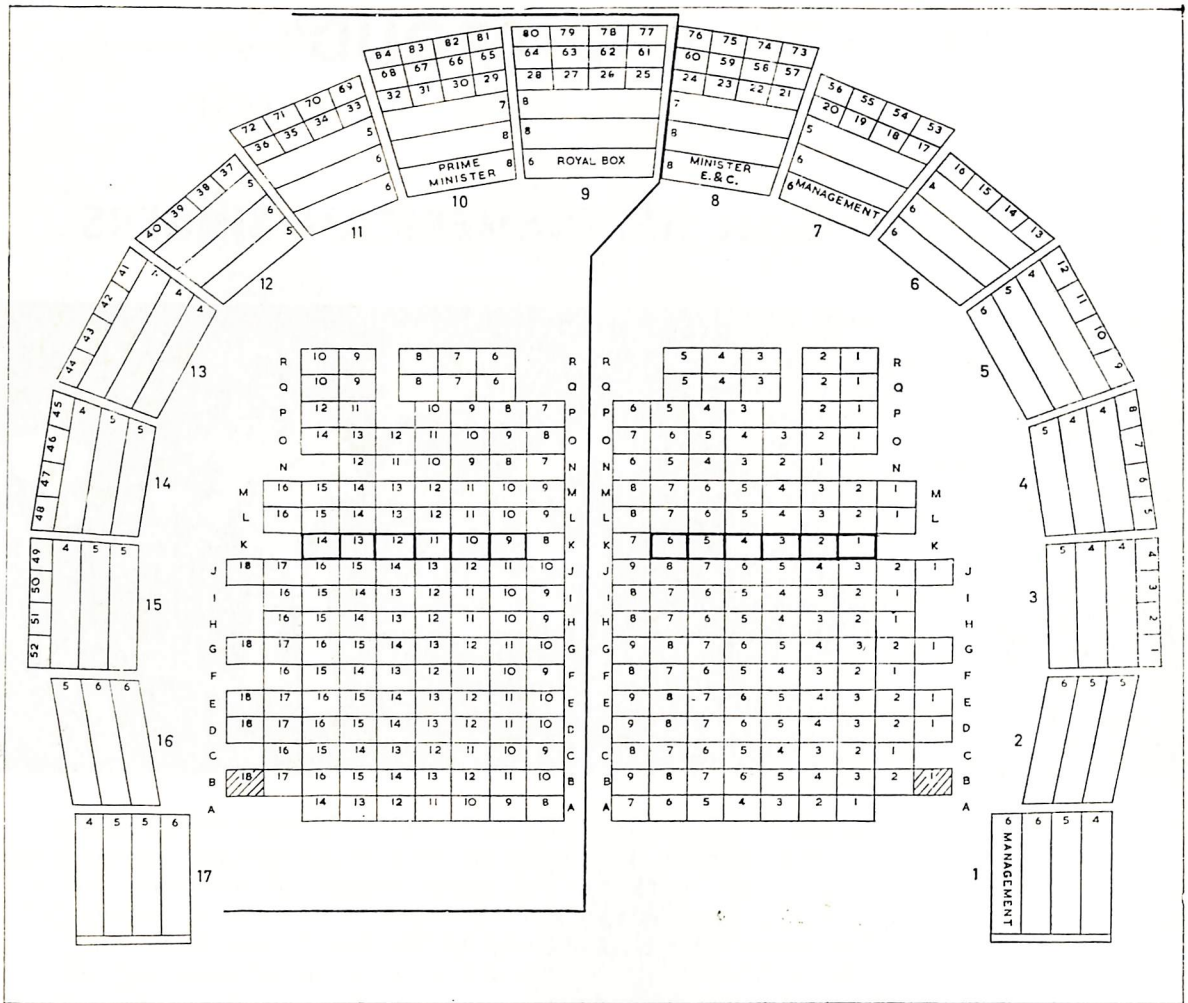

This production is prepared with the hope of offering the public spirituals and Gospels, as sung by the Blacks of North America. The singing of these songs, specially selected, will give a keener and truer insight as to why the Blacks struggle so persistently for equality. These songs were derived from the toils and tribulations experienced by Negroes, hundreds of years ago. The Negro Spiritual, i.e. "Songs of the Spirit", were freely sung by the captured and kidnapped Africans who were forced to go to an unknown land of hostile masters and overseers.

That part of American history cannot be told better than in the songs sung by the Blacks of that period. There are some in this modern world, who feel singing of the "Lord", "Land of Milk and Honey", "Sweet Chariots" and the fires of hell, should be discarded because they are now thought of as songs which "Uncle Toms" sang. In many cases, however, "The Drinking Ground", "Gonna Meet My Mother", "Swing Low Sweet Chariot", etc., were songs with double meanings. The Blacks were not allowed to beat drums, so they devised the method of singing what news they had to "broadcast". These songs spoke of escaping to the North, to freedom.

Every nation in the world has some sort of national music and/or dance and costume. Why then should the American Blacks be ashamed of singing the only songs which really link them to their enslaved, foreparents? The purpose is to perpetuate the spiritual and gospel songs so they will never die. The second half of the program is devoted to songs of "protest" against the oppression of all minorities of this world. The colour of the skin, the mixture of the blood, the tightness of one's hair or the size of his lips or nose is not important, "He is no less than I; therefore he is my brother and she is my sister".

LEX MONSON.
