

Information from Members

John De Battista writes

This is an interesting strange law which is still applicable in the UK. It is good to know about!

<http://travel.uk.msn.com/inspiration/adventure-activities/photos.aspx?cp-documentid=156306683&page=6>

And if you stick a stamp with the Queen's head on it upside down on an envelope, you are still committing treason. This law was passed in 1840, when the first penny black was issued, to stop people "insulting the monarchy".

A sheet of penny blacks and other valuable stamps... just in case, perhaps avoid sticking the Queen's head upside down

